ASSOCIATE Degree: Two years to a career or a jump-start to a bachelor's.

An associate degree is a college degree awarded after about 20 three semester hour classes. It either prepares students for a career following graduation or allows them to transfer into a bachelor's degree program.

Compared with workers whose highest level of educational attainment was a high school diploma, workers with an associate's degree averaged an extra $128 a week in 2001, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. People with associate's degrees also are more likely to find jobs: the unemployment rate in 2001 was more than 30 percent lower for associate degree holders compared with high school graduates.

"Ask A Counselor"

Email a counselor with your education questions. One question each month with our reply will be selected to appear in this newsletter. Only questions of general interest will be published.

Question: When do you expect eArmyU to be offered at APG?

Answer: The e ArmyU Program is not slated to be offered at APG for FY03. The list of eArmyU installations offering the program is available at: www.eArmyU.com. After reaching this site go to "ABOUT e ArmyU" at the top of the screen, then "Participating Installations" on the left column. The army is currently evaluating the program so keep in contact with us and the monthly newsletter for Updates regarding all ACES programs.
